- Codes of conduct should:
 - Be clear and precise. If they are vague, they will not be understood by employees
 - Include all relevant aspects to the particular organisation
 - Be followed by all the members of the organisation
- In order to:
 - Achieve mutual understanding on what is acceptable and what is not between the members of an organisation
 - Ensure that everyone is aware of regulations and expectations, as well as disciplinary actions in cases of non-conformance

Code of conduct vs personality

- Developing and implementing codes of conduct is a difficult task.
- Each organization's culture and atmosphere is different, therefore there is no uniform manner to implement a code of conduct to an organisation.
- The implementation should be performed to the entirety of the business including all areas of operations.

Code of conduct vs personality

- A code of conduct should be adapted to:
 - the needs, desires, and personalities of the stakeholders,
 - the culture,
 - the employees, in terms of:
 - Culture
 - Gender
 - Age
 - Family conditions
 - Physical/mental ability
 - Etc.

Otherwise, it could be conflicting with their values and beliefs, which will lead to conflicts and non-productivity

Discrimination in the work context

1. Bias or prejudice resulting in denial of opportunity, or unfair treatment regarding selection, promotion, or transfer.
Discrimination is practiced commonly on the grounds of age, disability, ethnicity, origin, political belief, race, religion, sex, etc. factors which are irrelevant to a person's competence or suitability.
2. Unequal treatment provided to one or more parties on the basis of a mutual accord or some other logical or illogical reason.
3. Differences in two rates not explainable or justifiable by economic considerations such as costs. (Business dictionary)

Improving existing code of conduct regarding discrimination, 1*

A. Description and rationale

- Anti-harassment and anti-discrimination policies make it clear that harassment and discrimination will not be tolerated, and set standards and expectations for behaviour.
- An anti-harassment or anti-discrimination policy should describe the types of behaviour that are discriminatory or harassing, and send the message that these issues are taken seriously.

B. Considerations

- separate policies for harassment and for other forms of discrimination.
- Anti-harassment and anti-discrimination policies set out expectations and standards, while complaint procedures set out how potential violations of these policies will be addressed

Improving existing code of conduct regarding discrimination, 3*

C. Elements to be included

1. Organization commitment

- a clear statement of the organization's commitment to creating and maintaining respect for human rights, and fostering equality and inclusion

2. Policy objectives

The policy should set out its objectives, such as promoting human rights, preventing harassment and discrimination, and defining principles and standards for behaviour

3. Applying the policy

The policy should set out the activities involved and who it applies to

4. List and explain protected grounds

5. Define key concepts

Define key concepts, consistent with human rights law and policy. Offer examples to clarify the concepts. It may be helpful to provide definitions of related concepts, such as racism, heterosexism, ageism, etc.

6. Roles and responsibilities

Set out the roles and responsibilities of the various parties present in the organization.
